Market Report

The liberalisation of Portugal’s gambling sector, which was set into motion in 2014 and has gathered pace this year, has come amid a general malaise in the overall market as unfavourable macroeconomic conditions continue to weigh on players’ disposable income.

According to estimates from national lottery operator Santa Casa, regulated Portuguese gross gaming revenue (GGR) stood at €1.23bn in 2014, down 3.1 percent on the figure estimated in 2010.

Portugal’s lottery- and casino-orientated gambling market is dominated by Santa Casa, which held an estimated 66.3 percent or €814m share of 2014’s €1.23bn GGR total. Building on its existing monopoly on lottery games, Santa Casa was this year granted the exclusive right to operate land-based betting and horse race betting games in Portugal.

The overriding subject of focus within Portugal’s regulatory overhaul is the introduction of a local licensing regime for remote gambling, allowing foreign operators to apply for an online gambling licence for the first time. With this in mind, this market report looks at the following topics:

- Taxation in focus.
- Lottery sector analysis.
- Sports betting sector analysis.
- Horse race betting sector analysis.
- Casinos sector analysis.

Taxation

Forming part of a broader ongoing debate, the variable turnover-based tax to be applied to online fixed-odds sports betting continues to be one of the most controversial aspects of Portugal’s new law on online gambling.

Under Decree Law No. 66/2015, which entered into force this summer, licensed sportsbooks will be required to pay an 8 percent tax on annual turnover up to €30m and a variable rate, capped at 16 percent, on turnover above that level.

The 8-16 percent turnover tax on sports betting contrasts with a significantly more favourable sliding rate of 15-30 percent to be applied to gross gaming revenue from online casino games, poker and bingo.
The chart (right) illustrates how the overall effective turnover tax to be levied on an individual licensed sports betting operator would vary according to said operator’s annual turnover from Portugal-based customers.

The variable nature of the tax means that market-leading operators will theoretically face lofty effective turnover taxes of between 14 and 15 percent, more than 75 percent above the rates faced by smaller players with annual turnover of €30m and below.

The severity of the sports betting tax can be better understood in terms of how it relates to operators’ gross gaming revenue, which more typically serves as the base from which tax is collected in locally-licensed online gambling markets across Europe.

Operator-specific effective GGR tax rates can be calculated by dividing wager-based rates by the operator’s gross win margin within the market in question, illustrated below comparing German and Portuguese turnover taxation rates.

Even at the lower 8 percent bound of the Portuguese turnover tax, GamblingCompliance estimates that licensed sportsbooks will effectively be handing over upwards of 40 percent of their GGR in taxes.

Saddled with such intense tax obligations, Portuguese licensees are unlikely to be able to set margins at levels competitive with offshore sportsbooks, requiring strict regulatory enforcement measures against unlicensed operators in order to make the market a viable investment.
Modelling a realistic range of gross win margins between 14 and 20 percent, well above the prevailing offshore average of between 7 and 10 percent, GamblingCompliance projects an effective sportsbook GGR tax of between 40 and 60 percent under an 8 percent tax on turnover.

Meanwhile, there is no realistic scenario whereby a licensed sports betting operator would pay an effective GGR tax any lower than 60 percent when faced with an overall turnover tax of 15 percent.

Should Portuguese-licensed sportsbooks operate with consolidated gross win margins of 17.5 percent, roughly in line with the regulated French market, their effective GGR tax rate would range between 46 and 86 percent under effective turnover charges of between 8 and 15 percent.

Online sports betting licence-holders in France and Germany, facing turnover tax rates of 9.3 percent and 5 percent respectively, have in recent years adapted their offerings to boost margins to adequate levels.

With operators unable to either set competitive overrounds or accept individual bets at long odds-on prices, regulated wagering activity in these jurisdictions has necessarily become skewed to high margin pre-match bets, specifically multiples.

In Germany, leading operator Bwin.Party offset a comparatively benign 5 percent turnover tax on sports betting by charging the same percentage on winning bets.

Speaking in November 2012, Bwin.Party chief executive Norbert Teufelberger told analysts that tax changes had led to a significant decline in German betting volumes, mitigated by an inflated gross win margin as customers switched to “higher odds single bets and more combination bets”.

Portugal’s higher variable rate has meanwhile been labelled “unworkable” by industry trade group the Remote Gambling Association, which has suggested that the 4.5 percent turnover tax faced by terrestrial sports betting monopoly Santa Casa may constitute state aid in light of the online tax.

Isabelle Andres, CEO of Betclic Everest, historically one of the market leaders in Portugal, told GamblingCompliance in January 2015 that operators could survive at the lower end of the 8-16 percent range but only if the tax is partnered with strict enforcement against unlicensed firms.

Andres said: “Of course I am unhappy with the level of betting tax on sports. But if this level of tax exists and if there is no illegal market, I believe it can still be viable under certain conditions.

“There is a limit. 16 percent on turnover – I don’t see how you can do that. 10 percent, if you take France, it’s quite excessive, but you can live with that if, for example, there is a proper fight against illegal sites. More than 10 percent seems unsustainable.”
With licensing now not expected to begin until early 2016, the eventual composition of the regulated Portuguese online sports betting market remains highly uncertain.

Several leading operators, including Bwin.Party, William Hill, Betfair and 888, suspended their Portuguese operations in the months leading up to, and immediately following, the passage of Decree Law No. 66/2015 in June 2015.

For several larger players, Portugal’s tax requirements are likely to prove too onerous, potentially opening the door for smaller operators to take advantage of a system inherently weighted in their favour.

Lottery

Elsewhere, underpinned by its instant offering, Portugal’s lottery sector ranks among the fastest growing in Europe. The history of lotteries in Portugal dates back over 230 years when Santa Casa was granted the right to operate the first Portuguese national lottery in 1783, running the first draw a year later.

As shown in this chart (right), Santa Casa has repeatedly reported strong growth in recent years, with record sales of €1.89bn in 2014 reflecting growth of 5.4 percent year-on-year.

In a press release addressing the record 2014 results, Santa Casa disclosed that its player base is expanding but on average gambling less. With the country still facing economic problems, average weekly bets per customer on Santa Casa’s games fell by 13 percent between 2012 and 2014.

An expanding active player base has served to offset this decline, growing by an impressive 20 percent over the past two years to 6.5m from 5.2m in 2012.

Much of the recent success experienced by Santa Casa has been driven by its scratchcard (Lotaria Instantanea) product which is set to overtake the pan-European draw game EuroMillions (Euromilhões) as the operator’s most popular lottery product.
Having stood at just €104m as recently as 2010, scratchcard sales have soared over the last four years to reach €710.8m in 2014.

On a European comparison, Santa Casa annual sales lag behind a number of its western European neighbours. However, when isolating its scratchcard product, the lottery outperforms a number of its peers.

With a population base of just over 10.3m and scratchcard sales of over €710m, GamblingCompliance estimates that Santa Casa’s scratchcard sales per capita stood at €68.5 in 2014, surpassing its national lottery counterparts in Germany, Belgium, Spain and the UK.

Sports Betting

In addition to its lottery offering, Santa Casa has operated the country’s football pools product Totobola for a number of years without achieving notable growth. However, after gaining approval through Decree Law No. 67/2015 earlier this year, Santa Casa launched its land-based sports betting product, Placard, in September of this year.

The launch saw Santa Casa accept fixed-odds bets of up to €100 on football, tennis and basketball events for the first time. Lottery chief executive Fernando Paes Afonso cited internal estimates that Placard could grow to generate €250m in annual sales and €50m in profits – figures which would make the game Santa Casa’s third largest product after EuroMillions and Lotaria Instantanea.
Horse Race Betting

In addition to fixed-odds sports betting, this year Santa Casa was granted a monopoly licence to offer land-based mutual horse race betting. The lottery is currently in the process of developing its operating model and plans to start offering horse race betting in early 2016.

Casinos

Meanwhile, the Portuguese casino market, first established in 1904, has exhibited a persistent downward trend since the start of the global economic crisis.

Currently, there are 11 casinos located in eight gaming zones dotted around Portugal. The market’s decline post-2008 has seen annual gaming revenue contract to a low of €267m in 2014, approximately €120m shy of the figure seen prior to the economic crisis.

Notably, the casino market has recorded a minor recovery in the year-to-date, with full-year gaming revenue looking likely to increase year-on-year for the first time since 2008. Gaming revenue for the first nine months of 2015 stood at €214.7m, up €14.5m on the corresponding period in 2014.

FAQ: Portugal’s New Online Gambling Regulatory Framework

This FAQ is based on Decree Law No. 66/2015 which came into force in April 2015. An English translation of the law is available in a second document as part of this delegate pack.

Regulatory

What type of regulatory regime is Portugal moving to?

Monopoly and local licensing.

The following games will remain under Santa Casa’s monopoly: online lotteries and mutual sports-betting games.

The following games will be under a local, multiple licensing regime: online fixed-odds sports betting; mutual and fixed-odds horseracing; casino games, including blackjack, baccarat, poker and gaming machines; and bingo.

What is the main law which regulates online gambling?

Online gambling is regulated through Decree Law No. 282/2003 (which regulates Santa Casa’s monopoly) and Decree Law No. 66/2015 (which introduced the local licensing regime).

Who regulates online gambling?

The Gambling Regulation and Inspection Service (SRIJ), which operates under the jurisdiction of the Tourism Office of Portugal, is in charge of the regulation and licensing activities established by Decree Law No. 66/2015.

What online gambling products are permitted under the scope of Decree Law No. 66/2015?

- Lottery games and mutual sports betting are under Santa Casa’s monopoly.
- Fixed-odds sports betting.
- Mutual and fixed-odds horse race betting.
- Betting exchanges.
- Bingo.
- Casino games, which include banca francesa, baccarat, blackjack/21, slot machines, poker games and poker in tournaments, American and French roulette.
Is there an official list of events which operators are required to follow in the case of betting games?

According to Decree Law No. 66/2015, the regulator will define a list of authorised events on which fixed-odds sports betting and horseracing bets can be offered. The official list may also include the type or moment of the bet and type of results. Article 56 states that it is a “very serious administrative offence” to offer horseracing betting and fixed-odds sports betting on events that are not on the official list.

Licensing

Are licence applications currently being accepted (or has a licensing window closed)?

Decree Law No. 66/2015 does not provide for a licensing window. Operators may already access the licence application forms (a checklist of documents required for this form are included in this delegate pack) and deliver it to the SRIJ. However, the licensing process cannot be concluded while the technical standards are not in force and the online gambling systems have not been certified by a testing laboratory and homologated by the regulator. The first online gambling licences are expected to be issued in early 2016.

Does an operator need to establish a company in Portugal in order to obtain an online gambling licence?

Licences available under the scope of Decree Law No. 66/2015 will be granted to companies formed as a public limited liability company, based in the European Union or the European Economic Area; and, in the case of non-EU/EEA (foreign) companies, those which have established a branch in Portugal.

Are there any ‘bad actor’ clauses in the legislation?

Article 13 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 sets out the conditions to obtain an online gambling licence. One such condition is to “be of good standing”. Article 14 explains what is required to be of good standing. According to Article 14 (4), legal persons and their representatives are deemed not in good standing if there has been a conviction by final judgment for any of the following offences:

• Crimes listed in Law No. 109/2009 (Cybercrime Law).
• Fraud or computer fraud.
• Wilful or negligent insolvency.
• Promotion, organisation or illegal operating of games of chance or state-run games, including for breach of exclusivity allocated or granted by the state.
• Falsification or counterfeiting of documents, when committed within the scope of the activity of operating land-based gambling and betting or online gambling and betting.
• Contempt, when committed within the scope of the activity of operating land-based gambling and betting or online gambling and betting.
• Illegal operating and fraud in land-based gambling and betting or online gambling and betting and, in addition, the offences set out in Decree-Law No. 422/89 (as amended).
• Corruption.
• Fraudulently obtaining a subsidy or grant, misuse of a grant, subsidy or subsidised loan, fraudulently obtaining credit and offending against economic reputation.
• Counterfeiting or imitation and illegal use of trademark, when committed within the scope of the activity of operating land-based gambling and betting or online gambling and betting.
• Money laundering.

Are there minimum financial requirements to receive a licence?

Article 16 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 specifies the economic and financial requirements to obtain a licence, establishing a 35 percent of financial autonomy ratio. This ratio is calculated based on the operator’s equity and net assets.

Additionally, Decree Law No. 66/2015 establishes that two guarantees are required: one in the amount of €500,000 to cover legal obligations, which includes players’ accounts and fines; and a second guarantee of €100,000 to cover the payment of taxes.

What are the licensing costs?

Article 92 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 determines that the fees are due for issuing a licence, for renewing a licence, for an authorisation to offer new types of online games and for the approval of the technical systems of the game.

On July 16, 2015, Ordinance No. 211/2015 was published in the official gazette, introducing the licensing fees. According to this ordinance, the following fees are due:

• €12,000 for issuing/renewing an online gambling licence, with the exception of an online bingo licence, which costs €2,000.
• €18,000 for the initial homologation of the technical systems. An additional fee of €2,000 is due for the homologation/renewal homologation of each type of game to be offered, either a betting category or games of chance.
• Online casino licensees that apply to offer new games will be responsible for a fee of €2,000 for each new licensed game, and a fee of €2,000 for each new game’s homologation.

How long are licences valid for?
Decree Law No. 66/2015 determines that licences will be granted for a period of three years, and will be renewable for similar periods of time.

Is there a limit on the number of licences?

Decree Law No. 66/2015 does not limit the number of licences available.

Operational

Are there technical standards available for online gambling?

The Portuguese gambling authority notified a draft version of the technical standards for the operation of online gambling services to the European Commission in August 2015. This draft received a detailed opinion from the commission in early November 2015, and therefore a final version of the technical standards, which is yet to be approved, may suffer changes before its final adoption.

Of relevance, the current draft version of the technical standards includes a number of player protection measures, such as:

- Suspension of a player from the game, keeping a list of suspended players and the reason for their suspension.

- Availability of self-limitation measures for players, such as setting a limit of daily, weekly and monthly deposits into the player’s account; and setting a limit of total daily, weekly and monthly bets placed.

- Self-exclusion measures should be available, including cooling-off periods, a self-exclusion for at least three months or for an indefinite period.

- Availability of player protection information, including self-assessment tests.

Are there any requirements in relation to the location of gambling equipment?

According to Decree Law No. 66/2015, licensees will be required to establish the entry and registration infrastructure in Portugal (Article 34).

Are there any separate data storage requirements?

Article 34 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 determines that licensees will be required to store in Portugal, for a period of ten years, all data related to the gambling activity.

Are there testing laboratories which are licensed to test gambling systems?

Decree Law No. 66/2015 determines that the certification of technical gambling systems will be carried out by accredited bodies.

Authorised testing laboratories are:

- NMI Metrology and Gaming.
- GLI.
- iTech Labs.
- SIQ.
- eCOGRA.

Has the legislation established a verification process for players?

Under the scope of Decree Law No. 66/2015, licensees will be required to register players and the register should include at least:

- Player’s complete name.
- Date of birth.
- Nationality.
- Profession.
- Address.
- Passport or civil identification number.
- Tax code number.
- Email.
- Identification of a payment account.

Just after the player is verified, the registration of the player is effective (Article 37).

Can players self-exclude?

Yes. Article 39 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 regulates self-exclusion. According to this article, players may self-exclude directly on the operator’s website or on the regulatory authority’s website, where the player excludes himself/herself from all online gambling licensees. The minimum period of self-exclusion is three months and it may last indefinitely, if the player does not set an ending date.
Do suppliers of gambling software companies need to be licensed?

No, software suppliers are not required to obtain a licence.

Are there any restrictions on the payment processors an operator can use?

Article 42 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 establishes that only electronic payment instruments which use the legal currency of Portugal may be accepted. Article 42 of Decree Law No. 66/2015 also rules that operators may only accept players’ payments which are from payment service providers authorised by the competent authorities of the relevant country and which allow the correct identification of the party that ordered the payment operation.

Are there any rules pertaining to customer/player funds?

According to Decree Law No. 66/2015, payments due to players must be paid by the operator through a bank account held in an EU/EEA member state. Operators must keep in such bank account a minimum amount to cover the payment of the global balance of players’ accounts (Article 44). In addition, Article 40 determines that players’ accounts must never have a negative balance.

Are licensed operators permitted to advertise?

Decree Law No. 66/2015 has amended Article 21 of the Publicity Code. Initially, gambling could not be advertised in Portugal, with the exception of Santa Casa’s games. However, according to the new text of Article 21 of the Publicity Code, gambling advertisements are now allowed.

Are there any restrictions on licensed operators advertising?

According to the new text of Article 21 of the Publicity Code, as amended by Decree Law No. 66/2015, gambling advertisements should:

- Be socially responsible.
- Not suggest an easy way to obtain a gain, success, social achievements or special abilities due to gambling.
- Not encourage excessive gambling.
- Not be directed at minors.
- Not advertise in schools or other infrastructure areas designed to be used by minors.
- Not advertise within 250 metres in a direct line from schools or other infrastructure areas designed to be used by minors. This rule does not apply to Santa Casa’s games.
- In events where minors play a principal role or in events designed for minors, no gambling advertisements are allowed in the event or in the event marketing communications.

- Not associate a gambling operator with the granting of loans.

Is there a code of conduct/practice applicable to online gambling operators?

Decree Law No. 66/2015 determines that codes of conduct may be approved; however, at the time of publication (November 2015) these are yet to be issued.

Taxation

What are the applicable taxation rates for online gambling?

Santa Casa does not pay gambling taxes. However, it must pay a stamp duty tax, which is 4.5 percent of turnover.

Decree Law No. 66/2015 has set the taxation system for private operators. For online bingo, mutual horseracing and casino games, the tax is based on gross gaming revenues, ranging between 15 and 30 percent depending on revenues. For fixed-odds sports betting and fixed-odds horseracing, the tax is based on turnover and ranges from 8 and 16 percent.

Player winnings for the games regulated by Decree Law No. 66/2015 are not subject to taxation.

Are online gambling services subject to VAT?

No.

Enforcement

Is there a blacklist of unlicensed websites in place?

No.

Are payments blocking measures provided for in law?

No.

Are website blocking measures provided for in law?

Yes. According to Article 47 of Decree Law No. 66/2015, the regulatory authority may request that internet server providers block access to unlicensed operators’ websites. Internet service providers have 48 hours to block unlicensed operators (Article 31).

Are there any relevant criminal penalties or fines which might apply to the offering of unlicensed online gambling?

Offering gambling outside authorised places is punishable with a prison term of up to two years as well as a fine. The penalty is applicable to managers, directors, employees and agents of the operator (Article 108, Decree Law No. 422/1989).

Unlicensed gambling operators face fines of up to €44,890. Further penalties include confiscation of property related to the unlicensed activity (Articles 11, 12 and 13, Decree Law No. 282/2003).

According to Decree Law No. 66/2015, offering unlicensed online gambling in Portugal is punishable with a fine and prison terms of up to five years (Article 49), while fraud in the online game, defined as changing the rules and procedures established as a method to obtain luck or bad luck, is punishable with a fine and prison terms of between three to eight years (Article 50).
